DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Applicant's election with traverse of claims 1-17 filed 1-20-04 is acknowledged. The traversal is on the ground(s) that any field of search would necessarily encompass searching all groups. This is not found persuasive. As stated in the restriction, for example, the claims of group I require a semiconductor device, whereas the remaining groups do not; group II requires a CVD deposition and group III requires a liquid deposition method, but group I does not have any deposition requirements; group IV requires a specific patterning method for nickel carbonyl, but the other groups do not. Therefore, searching all four groups would require a great deal more searching time than any one group alone.

The requirement is still deemed proper and is therefore made FINAL.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 7-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. Independent claims 7 and 13 disclose forming a final passivation layer over said metal bump, and forming an opening within said final passivation layer, exposing said metal terminating pad. However, since the passivation layer is not formed over the terminating pad, then forming an opening in the passivation layer would not expose the terminating pad.

A preliminary search indicates that if line 4 of claims 7 and 13 was corrected to "forming a final passivation layer over said metal terminating pad", then said claims and their dependent claims would be allowable. A final search will be conducted if/when Applicant corrects said claims as noted above.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Benenati et al. (6,177,729) in view of Estes et al. (6,410,415). Benenati discloses a method of bonding a chip to a substrate, comprising the steps of: providing a semiconductor chip (Figs.4a-4c el.26) having an exposed metal terminating pad (el.24) thereover, and a separate substrate having a corresponding exposed metal bump (el.20) thereover (col.2 lines 36-38); forming a conducting polymer plug (el.40a) over said exposed metal terminating pad; aligning said conducting polymer plug of said semiconductor chip with said corresponding metal bump (Fig.4b); and adhering and permanently attaching said conducting polymer plug of said semiconductor chip with said corresponding metal bump of said separate substrate (Fig.5a). However, Benenati does not disclose forming a conforming interface layer, or copper terminating pads. Estes discloses forming a conforming interface layer (Fig.4 el.5) over said conducting polymer plug; mating said conforming interface layer over said conducting polymer plug with said corresponding metal bump (Fig.4); and thermally decomposing said conforming interface layer, adhering and permanently attaching said conducting polymer plug of said semiconductor chip with said corresponding metal bump of said separate substrate (col.10 lines 6-15, 57-65). Therefore, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to use the conforming interface layer of Estes with the method of Benenati in order to eliminate the need for an additional underfill step (col.20 lines 43-50) [claim 1].

Benenati also discloses wherein said exposed metal bump is comprised of copper (col.3 lines 42-49). Copper terminating pads are commonly used in the semiconductor industry because they have high electrical conductance and are solder wettable [claim 3].

Claims 4-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Benenati in view of Estes as applied to claims 1 and 3 above, and further in view of Nuytkens (6,552,555). Benenati and Estes do not disclose a conducting polymer plug comprised of a material selected from the group consisting of doped polyacetylene, poly Art Unit: 2813

(para-phenylene vinylene) (PPV), and polyaniline, or a conducting polymer plug that is a material doped to degeneracy. However, Nuytkens discloses wherein said conducting polymer plug is comprised of a material selected from the group consisting of doped polyacetylene, poly (para-phenylene vinylene) (PPV), and polyaniline (col.2 lines 1-26) [claim 4]; and wherein said conducting polymer plug is a material doped to degeneracy (col.2 lines 1-4) [claim 5]. Therefore, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to use the polymer plug material of Muytkens with the method of Benenati and Estes in order to form flexible contacts that compensate for differences in height or shape (col.1 lines 52-55) – claim 4; and to form an elastic conductive polymer (col.7 lines 36-43) – claim 5.

Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Benenati it al. (6,177,729) in view of Estes et al. (6,410,415) as applied to claim 1 above.

Benenati in view of Estes do not disclose a conducting polymer plug from about 1000 to 10,000 Angstroms thick. Note that the specification contains no disclosure of either the critical nature of the claimed dimensions or any unexpected results arising therefrom. Where patentability is said to be based upon particular chosen dimensions or upon another variable recited in a claim, the Applicant must show that the chosen dimensions are critical. Allowable Subject Matter

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter for claim 6. The prior art of record does not teach or disclose or make obvious a method of bonding a chip to a substrate, comprising inter alia: a conforming interface layer comprising nickel carbonyl. The conforming interface layer of Estes is formed of thermoplastic or thermoset materials, which is very different in material and fabrication method than nickel carbonyl; Benenati is silent as to an interface material.

Claim 6 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
